

Abstract

A method and computer program product are disclosed for determining an optimal classifier model for a pattern recognition system and updating the determined model to 5 recognize new output classes. An initial plurality of classifier models are selected from a set of generated classifier models. An optimal representative classifier for each classifier model is selected according to an iterative optimization routine. The representative 10 classifier having the highest associated value for a fitness function is accepted.